

TZB-149E

It appears that all the plans are based on the best available data and predictions. Unfortunately, there is no guaranty that the predictions are going to be right. I think which ever plan is adopted, we should over build the new structure by at least 25%.

Also, one of the requirements should be that the cost of repair due to wear and tear for the first 10 years is zero! That is, build something that does not fall-a-part right away. (I'm thinking of the failure of the big dig in Boston.)

Steve Peck
845-358-3870

10